Connect and Inspire

Microsoft Power Platform accelerator

Business challenge

Organisations often require custom applications, however, developing custom software is both a time consuming and expensive process that involves hiring skilled professionals such as developers and designers, as well as undertaking testing, refining and deployment. This can slow down key processes and make it difficult to respond to business needs and changing market demands.

Custom software also requires regular updates, bug fixes, and maintenance, which can be expensive. This can limit business agility and potential for innovation, as organisations may not have the resources required to keep up with the latest technological advancements.

How we help

Insight's Connect and Inspire program leverages Microsoft's low-no-code Power Platform to identify use cases for manual process automation that will drive efficiencies within your business.

Insight's Power Platform specialists will guide your business and IT users on the tools they can use to solve business problems through automation and to identify and articulate the pain points they're experiencing. This includes a Power Platform Master Class with real-world challenges relevant to your business, guided app development, and an ideation and pitch session to unlock innovative solutions.
