

5 reasons why Surface is your best asset in your classroom

Versatility

It's simple to switch between a tablet, studio, and laptop experience with Surface. These modes, in addition to touch and pen, give you and your students the versatility moving between classrooms, reviewing documents and more.

Inking

Surface Go and Surface Pro have a PixelSense™ display that supports full touch and inking in the same aspect ratio as a sheet of paper for a seamless transition from analogue to digital. Take notes, draw diagrams, and underline crucial information with the inking feature.

Deploy & Manage

The school technologist or district IT department can provision and upgrade devices remotely and securely. Instead of spending hours updating all of your devices, you can do it in minutes with the cloud. Administrators can ensure that everything is working properly in the classroom so that students can focus on learning.

Packed with Power

Surface Go and Surface Pro are both packed with the latest generation of Intel processors, ready to tackle whatever you throw at it. Whether it's running a presentation or creating new content for you and your students, Surface has the capacity to tackle it all.

Security

Every component of the Surface is protected by the most stringent security measures offered by Microsoft, including the firmware, operating system, and hardware. The most private student data is kept protected thanks to Surface.
